

The Picnic Tap Bringing Craft Beer to the Nashville Farmers' Market

POSTED BY DANA KOPP FRANKLIN ON FRI, SEP 26, 2014 AT 1:25 PM

The Picnic Tap, a craft-beer pub, is coming to the Nashville Farmers' Market, with a grand opening scheduled for this Thursday, Oct. 2.

"The Picnic Tap is pioneering as the first Nashville Farmers' Market establishment to offer craft beer," the market says in a release today. The pub will feature a rotating selection of local and regional craft beers and growler fill-ups to go, along with a food menu centered on locally sourced charcuterie.

Located inside the Market House, The Picnic Tap will offer seating so shoppers can take a break and enjoy craft beer and a snack during visits to the market.

The Picnic Tap's owner-operator, Eric Woodard, held a preview at the most recent Night Market event last week.

"As a longtime home brewer and fan of craft beer, I've always loved places that showcase the beers of a particular city or region," Woodard says in the release. "I've thought about opening a place like The Picnic Tap for several years now — a very casual place where you can hang out, relax, and enjoy a local hand-crafted beer with friends."

The Picnic Tap will open at the Nashville Farmers' Market (900 Rosa L. Parks Blvd.) this Thursday, Oct. 2 from noon to 3 p.m. Regular hours will be 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, and 11:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Thursday through Sunday. (The pub will be closed after 4 p.m. on select days when private events are held at the Nashville Farmers' Market.) Check out The Picnic Tap on Facebook for updates.

Tags: The Picnic Tap, Nashville Farmers' Market, Eric Woodard, beer pubs in Nashville, growler fills in Nashville, Image